20th-Century Printing Is Focus Of New Rare Book Division Exhibit

A new exhibition entitled "Twentieth-Century American Fine Printing" will open on January 6 in the foyer of the Rare Book and Special Collections Division of the Library of Congress. The 28 books on display are representative of the work of 25 of this country's finest 20th-century printers and designers, including F. W. Goudy, Bruce Rogers, D. B. Updike, William Everson, and Andrew Hoyem. The books span the years from 1904 to 1980 and range in size from a two-inch miniature book about private printing to the mammoth folio edition of Papermaking in America, written and printed by Dard Hunter.

The books follow a tradition of finely produced books rooted in medieval manuscripts, perfected in the 15th century by early printers, and preserved by dedicated master printers and their apprentices. Fine printing declined in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, but the arts and crafts movement in England revived an interest in the beauty of printed books and inspired William Morris to set up his own hand press, the Kelmscott Press, in London in 1891. The beautiful books issued by Morris motivated a whole generation of turn-of-the-century U.S. printers.

This edition of Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass was printed by Grabhorn Press in San Francisco, Calif., in 1929.

Twentieth-century fine printing in the United States originated in the great publishing centers of New York City, Boston, and Chicago. It was introduced to the West Coast by printers such as John Henry Nash and Edwin and Robert Grabhorn and now flourishes throughout the United States. There are more fine printers in the United States today than at any time in U.S. history. Many of the books they produce are made in the traditional manner using the hand press and handmade paper; often they are bound by hand. To accommodate these books from past and present fine printers, the Library's Rare Book and Special Collections Division has created a Press Collection from which most of the items on exhibit were drawn. It is a continually growing collection of the output of American and British small private presses and allows researchers to easily and quickly examine the work of various presses.

"Twentieth-Century American Fine Printing" may be seen between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. in the foyer of room 256 on the second floor east side of the Thomas Jefferson Building.

The cover illustration for this issue of the Information Bulletin is taken from a 1923 etching by John Sloan entitled "Washington Arch" (located in Greenwich Village in New York City). A black-and-white reproduction of the original is also the subject of one of several new greeting cards offered by the Library in the 1981–82 Card and Gift Catalog, copies of which may be obtained by writing to the Library of Congress, Central Services Division, Washington, D.C. 20540.

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin is issued weekly by the Library of Congess and distributed free of charge to publicly supported libraries and research institutions, academic libraries, learned societies, and allied organizations in the United States.

Comparable institutions and organizations in other countries may arrange to receive the Bulletin on the exchange basis by applying in writing to the Library's Exchange and Gift Division. All other correspondence should be addressed to the LC Information Bulletin, Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540.

Chinese Author Visits Library

Epicurean Delights Consumed At Annual Christmas Luncheon

While holiday music played in the background, some 100 WRA Cooking Club members and guests feasted on a gourmet Christmas luncheon on Monday, December 7, at the Church of the Reformation. A garland of pine needles dotted with dried flowers and pine cones and arrangements of poinsettias accented the tables, which were covered with such delicacies as bacon-wrapped shrimp, empanadas, Polish eggs, mushroom pate, tomato eggplant rounds, and chocolate and pumpkin cheesecakes. This year's organizers of the annual event were Leola Decker and Alex Mathews.

The chairmen were assisted by committee heads Arnie Bellefontaine, decorations; Floris Flam, breads; Peter de la Garza, glögg; Mary Ann Habib, dessert; Grace Hall, clean up; Barbara Killian, main course; Margaret Loewinger, hospitality; Gregory New, beverages; Chrissie Nash, appetizers; Jack Reamy, invitations/programs; Sherry Shapiro, main course; Margaret Tappan, early morning receiving; and Kris Vajs, set up.

During a brief ceremony, club president Maurvene Williams presented the club's symbol, a silver spoon, to the president-elect, Maryann Ferrarese, and introduced other newly elected club officers: Barbara Killian, vice president/president-elect;

Chrissie Nash and Marilyn Nelson prepare cups of cheese sticks and nuts for appetizers.

Anne Carpenter, recording secretary; Ann Teitelbaum, corresponding secretary; and Vivian Fitzgerald, treasurer. Following these introductions, Associate Librarian of Congress Donald C. Curran, the guest of honor, made a few remarks.

Summing up the activities of 1981, Ms. Williams mentioned a few of the club's diverse programs. Demonstrations were given on Chinese cooking techniques for quick meals, Lebanese cooking, the preparation of piroski, and deboning chickens. Club members also assisted in the planning and execution of the American Folklife Center's Foodways Day.

Lawrence S. Robinson Named Assistant Chief of Preservation

Lawrence S. Robinson, preservation microfilming officer, has been named assistant chief of the Preservation Office, effective November 2.

In addition to his skills as a manager, Mr. Robinson brings to this position a thorough knowledge of the Library's preservation activities. He has served as the Library's preservation microfilming officer since 1972, managing the Library's preservation microfilming program. Through his work at the Library and through his active role in the American Library Association, the National Micrographics Association, and the American Society for Information, he has gained extensive knowledge of preservation theories, principles, and practices on a national level.

As assistant chief of the Preservation Office, Mr. Robinson will be responsible for coordinating the Library-wide activities relating to the Library's conservation and preservation program, enabling Peter Sparks, the chief of the Preservation Office and the Library's national preservation program officer, to devote a substantial portion of his time, particularly in the next six months, to reviewing and further developing the Library's national preservation program.

In 1976, Mr. Robinson served as a member of the Library's Task Force on Goals, Organization, and Planning. He also participated in the planning conference for a national preservation program, which was held in the same year. He chairs the Library's Incentive Awards Committee and in 1980 received a Meritorious Service Award in recognition of the special achievement and responsibilities he successfully carried out as a member of that committee.

A native of Washington, D.C., Mr. Robinson received a bachelor of arts degree from Storer College in Harpers Ferry, W. Va., and did graduate work at the American University, Washington, D.C. In 1950–52, Mr. Robinson served with distinction with the U.S. Army. He joined the Library staff in 1952. Until his appointment as assistant brittle books project officer in 1967, he served in the Serial and Government Publications and Binding Divisions.

Roger Wireman Receives 25-Year Pin

Senior collections specialist Roger Wireman was recently presented a 25-year Federal Service Award pin by Elizabeth F. Stroup, director for general reference, Research Services.

Mr. Wireman began his career at the Library of Congress in 1959 following three years of service with the U.S. Army. He progressed through a variety of positions in the former Stack and Reader Division, as well as in the Photoduplication Service, until joining the Special Search Unit in 1971. As first a special searcher and then a senior collections specialist in that three-person unit, Mr. Wireman assisted readers in tracking down materials which had been reported as not on the shelf (NOS). With the reorganization of 1978, the Special Search Unit was expanded and became the Special Search Section of the Collections Management Division.

Mr. Wireman is well known throughout the public service areas of the Library for his helpfulness to staff and readers alike in resolving collection-related problems.

Thomas McRae Earns 20-Year Pin

Thomas R. McRae, motor vehicle operator in the Motor Vehicle Unit, Central Services Division, was presented a Federal Service Award pin for 20 years of service on Friday, December 4, by Elliott C. Finley, chief of the division.

A native of Raeford, N.C., Mr. McRae was first appointed to the Library staff as a laborer in the former Buildings and Grounds Division. He was promoted to a similar position in April 1962. In November 1976, he was transferred to the Central Services Division and promoted to the position he now holds.

Mr. McRae is married and the father of three children.

reform in north China that has been translated into 13 languages. She has also served as editor of various Chinese literary magazines and has participated in several writers' and women's organizations in China.

Upon her arrival at the Library, Mme. Ding and her party, which included her husband, Chen Ming, were welcomed by Associate Librarian for National Programs Carol A. Nemeyer. There followed an exchange of gift publications, with Ding Ling presenting to the Library autographed copies of several of her published works and receiving in return a copy of the Treasures of the Library of Congress and other Library publications. Before the luncheon meeting, she was given a tour of the Jefferson Building and of the Chinese collection housed in the Asian Division in the Adams Building.

Richard C. Howard, acting chief of the Asian Division, Ding Ling, Chen Ming, and Warren M. Tsuneishi, director of area studies, Research Services.

The luncheon meeting was attended by officials from the International Communication Agency and other Government agencies, scholars of Chinese literature from the faculties of several universities of the Washington, D.C., area, and interested members of the Library staff. Mme. Ding spoke briefly of her experiences as a writer, and, in response to questions from the audience, she commented at some length on the literary scene in China and the relationship between political events and creative writing. She was presented with a special bibliography, prepared by the Chinese and Korean Section, listing 40 of her works held by the Library of Congress.

Local History and Genealogy Room Relocated to Jefferson Building

The Library's Local History and Genealogy Reading Room moved on December 10 from the fifth floor of the John Adams Building to space formerly occupied by the Law Library in Room 244 of the Jefferson Building.

This move will allow the Local History and Genealogy Reading Room to greatly enhance its services to the public. The present reference collection of some 5,000 volumes will more than triple, as will the number of seats available for researchers. Because all of the class C materials (including family histories), class F materials (local histories), and city and telephone directories not in the expanded reference collection will be housed in stacks adjacent to the reading room, waiting time for delivery of these items will decrease significantly.

The move required closing the reading room for only one evening, from 5 to 9:30 on December 10. Regular hours of service resumed on December 11. The Local History and Genealogy Reading Room is open from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. weekdays, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays and many holidays, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays.
